WATER FRONT ODDS AND ENDS SCHOOL BOARD MEET TONIGHT

GOVERNMENTAL SOUNDINGS AT THE BAR SHOW THERE HAS BEEN BUT LITTLE FILLING.

Indications are that the board of survey now at work on the soundings at the bar will find that there has been no bad filling. While the work of making the soundings has not proceeded far enough yet to make any definite forecast, nevertheless enough has been done to indicate that the river is in good shape. The Arago, the federal steamer used by the board of survey, went out yesterday but found the water so choppy that the soundings could not be carried on and she put in again.

Captain Buchanan of the Arago said yesterday that he had heard but few complaints recently from the fishermen and others who frequent the mouth of the river, and he considered that a pretty good indication that the soundings were all right. It looks as if the jetty is doing good work.

The Arago picked up a net yesterday and put into the Iron Works slip to have the pieces removed from her propeller. It is probable the Arago will complete the soundings within seven or eight days.

The George W. Elder will depart at 6 o'clock this morning, from the Callender wharf, for Eureka, San Francisco and Los Angeles. The steamer Alliance will leave the Callender wharf at 7 o'clock Sunday morning for Marshfield.

The steamer Wellesley, with a cargo of lumber from Stella went out yesterday morning, bound for San Diego. She carried 757,575 feet.

The steamer Breakwater left out yesterday for Coos Bay with passengers and freight.

A ship's yawl is being built for the state pilot schooner San Jose at the Leathers' yard.

The French bark Vendee went up the river yesterday on the hawsers of the Harvest Queen.

The tug Daring went out yesterday with the barge Washougal for Gray's Harbor.

The oil tank steamer Argyl departed for California ports.

TO INVESTIGATE ANDERSON'S DEATH

BODY FOUND FLOATING IN RIVER YESTERDAY AND THERE IS SOME HINT OF FOUL PLAY.

The body of Conrad Anderson, the fisherman who disappeared on the night of June 1, was found floating in the river near the Clatsop mill yesterday morning by Fred Olson. Coroner Pohl was notified and took charge of the body. Because of the mystery surrounding the death of Anderson an inquest will be held, probably next Monday morning. In the meantime an effort will be made to trace the dead man's movements on the night that he disappeared, and it is hinted that there is a possibility that the investigation may show foul play.

How Anderson met his death is now a complete mystery, though one possible explanation is that he fell into the water while under the influence of liquor and drowned. That he had been drinking is known. This explanation might be accepted as final were it not for the fact that Anderson usually carried considerable money with him, and this night he is said to have shown approximately $50. Besides this it is averred that he carried several deposit slips. It is stated that when Anderson was last seen by his friends on the night of his death he showed two $20 gold pieces. Then he was seen no more.

In the pockets of the dead man yesterday the coroner found only $3.15. The rest of the money and the deposit slips were gone, and this fact apparently indicates robbery if nothing else.

Anderson was 29 years old and unmarried.

THEY SEE CLATSOP'S COURT HOUSE

UMATILLA COUNTY COMMISSIONER VISITS ASTORIA TO INSPECT COUNTY'S NEW BUILDING.

Horace Walker, commissioner of Umatilla county, came to Astoria yesterday with the object in view of looking over the new court house. Umatilla county is contemplating establishing steel vaults and other modern improvements, and it was thought best to inspect the Astoria building before anything was done. Mr. Walker's visit is a pretty good indication that the fame of Clatsop's court house has spread far and wide throughout the state. During the afternoon Mayor Herman Wise played the host to Mr. Walker and showed him about the city, and it was evident that the Umatilla commissioner, who had never been in Astoria before, was agreeably surprised with the prosperity and appearance of the city.

While at the Irving Club Mayor Wise borrowed a telescope so that the visitor might get a good view of the surrounding county from the bluffs. The mayor and his guest laboriously climbed to a coign of vantage and then assayed to use the glass. But it wouldn't work. First the mayor tried to get the hanged thing into focus, and then the visitor tried to work the blamed thing. Finally they gave it up. They both thought a joke had been worked on them, but later the owner showed them that nothing was required but a simple turn of the wrist to make a mouse look as big as a baby elephant a mile away.
